

Women in Data Science School Girls Competition

Women in Data Science Conference

The Women in Data Science (WiDS) Conference aims to inspire and educate data scientists, regardless of gender, and support women in the field.

The WiDS Conference will be held on February 3, 2017 at Stanford University, and there are various "Women in Data Science" events taking place across the world in February 2017; in collaboration with Stanford University. The Data Lab is happy to host the Edinburgh session on 15 February 2017.

For more information on the "Global Women in Data Science" events please visit: www.widsconference.org

School Girls Competition

We would like to welcome some "Women Data Scientists in the Making" from schools across Scotland to our event. As we have limited capacity (25), we will be running a competition open to all schools in Scotland, and the girls from the winning class will be invited to attend the afternoon tea event, where they will hear from successful and inspiring women in the field of Data Science.

How to enter

To participate, each class must submit their best idea of "How the world will look in 20 years, thanks to data and technology"

Submissions can be made in the form of a drawing/illustration, video (max. 2 minutes), or simply a short essay summarising the class girls' ideas (max 1000 words).

The winning class will be invited to attend the afternoon tea event, and present their ideas to the audience.

WiDS Afternoon Tea Edinburgh

Balmoral Hotel

1 Princes St
Edinburgh
EH2 2EQ

Wednesday 15
February 2017

11:00 to 13:30

Competition Submissions

To participate, the class leader (teacher or parent) must submit the class' entry to info@thedatalab.com by 5pm on Tuesday 31st January 2017.

*Open both to primary and secondary students.
* Capacity: 25 students.